Pricewatch – Qatar move hints at shape of LNG curve to come

Qatar's announcement this week that it will lift a moratorium on offshore production may start to ease concerns over the boom-and-bust cycle some had predicted in global LNG markets over the next ten years.

Futures markets remain relatively calm for now, with prices showing small seasonal changes out to the far end of the curve in the middle of next year. The question on peoples' minds is: what will happen early next decade?
