UK government plays down calls for inquiry into closure of Rough gas storage site

The UK government has brushed aside renewed calls for a formal inquiry into the closure of the country's largest gas storage facility and its implications for British energy security.

Responding to a letter from UK lobby group the Energy and Utilities Alliance (EUA), a government spokesperson told Gas Matters Today the closure of the Rough facility is not expected to impact prices or supply.

"The UK has highly diverse and flexible sources of gas supply through ...
