TEPCO receives watchdog backing to restart reactors at Japan's largest nuclear plant

Japan's nuclear watchdog granted Tokyo Electric Power (TEPCO) initial approval to bring two reactors online at Japan's largest nuclear power station, which could begin to ease the country's demand for LNG imports, however a restart could still be years away.

The Japanese Nuclear Regulatory Authority (NRA) met on Wednesday and approved a draft plan by TEPCO to carry out improvement works, which the watchdog believes...
