US Democratic hopefuls unite over climate crisis but split over role of shale gas

It is hydraulic fracturing, aka fracking, that has put the US at the top of world oil and gas production; that has made it the world's largest oil producer and launched the US LNG export industry. Because of fracking, the US is expected to remain a major hydrocarbon exporter for many years to come, and thousands of jobs will be sustained by the oil and gas companies using this technology – unless it is outlawed under a Democratic presidency following the 2020 elections.
