2020 IN REVIEW: South-east Asia offers ray of hope for beleaguered LNG suppliers

The past 12 months saw significant progress in LNG import projects, capacity expansions and licences in south-east Asia, which has long been described by industry players as the next 'hotspot' for LNG. While it offers a ray of hope for LNG producers desperate for new outlets in this time of oversupply, how big a role LNG can play in weaning most of the region's countries off coal remains uncertain.
