Some Indian gas and oil workers return to work but strike continues

Two of the main companies involved in the three-day strike of 55,000 oil workers in India say that strikers have have called off their action, but workers at 11 other companies continued the stoppage, now in its third day. India Oil Company and Bharat Petroleum said they hoped to resume activities tonight. The indefinite strike, in demand of higher wages, is organised by the Oil Sector Officers Association.
