Gastech debates how low gas price must go before LNG production is shut in

With some pundits now talking about US gas prices perhaps plunging below the $visual_editor/MMBtu level this summer, a key theme for debate at this week's Gastech conference in Abu Dhabi has been the price level that will persuade LNG suppliers to shut in production. Views have been surprisingly diverse – what has emerged is that the answer is far from straightforward, with financial, operational and associated liquids production all vital factors to take into account.
