UK, Germany and France call again for a 30% cut in emissions target

The UK, Germany and France have launched a joint initiative to persuade Europe to cut its carbon emissions by 30% by visual_editor0visual_editor0. “We are convinced that Europe has the capability – but it does not yet have the right incentives for changing investment patterns,” the countries climate change ministers Chris Huhne, Norbert Röttgen and Jean-Louis Borloo said in a joint statement
