Ukrainian energy minister heads for Moscow for gas price negotiations

Ukraine's energy minister Yury Boiko will arrive in Moscow on Friday in an effort to persuade Gazprom's management to lower the price of Russian gas imports to Ukraine. "We have set as a goal a revision of the extremely unfavourable agreement with the Russian Federation and we will continue to try to convince our Russian partners of the need to do this," Ukrainian prime minister Mykola Azarov told a cabinet meeting this week.
