Lithuania's energy minister hopes to agree lower gas price with Gazprom

Lithuania's energy minister Arvydas Sekmokas has told the country's parliament he is confident he will agree a deal with Gazprom on a lower price for Russian gas imports. Lithuania is hoping to cut the gas price by at least 15%, claiming Gazprom had been charging an "unfair" price as a "punishment" for Lithuania's plans to liberalise its gas market.
