UK Energy Summit Debate: Who should pay for the UK's energy infrastructure?

Key industry figures have gathered in London today to discuss how the energy sector can find investment for future infrastructure, and to debate who should pay for it. RWE npower's group chief executive Volker Beckers, International Power's Steve Riley and Dieter Helm, professor of energy policy at Oxford University all spoke at the Economist's UK energy summit today and discussed how energy infrastructure needs to shape up in the future.
