Norway completes Barents seismic survey

Norway's Petroleum Directorate (NPD) said on Wednesday that a three-month 11,400 km² seismic survey of the Norwegian sector of the Barents Sea on the frontier with Russia has been completed. The survey was initiated after Russia and Norway resolved a maritime border dispute. Several gas discoveries have been made in the wider Barents Sea, which the Norwegian government hopes will become "a new gas region for Europe".
