Qatari maintenance to restrict UK LNG supply: JP Morgan

Maintenance work in Qatar is likely to tighten the supply of uncontracted LNG to the UK, as well as to other countries as soon as this winter, according to JP Morgan analysts. In response they have updated their global LNG model assessing the supply and demand balance through to December 2013. Qatargas is taking its three largest trains offline for two weeks each between September and mid November 2011, while RasGas will shut one of its trains in January 2012.
