Encana reacts angrily to EPA draft report on Wyoming drilling

Calgary-based Encana has reacted angrily to a draft report released by the US Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) last week, in which the EPA linked Encana's hydraulic fracturing activities with water contamination in Wyoming. Encana, a Canadian upstream company focusing on exploration and development of unconventional natural gas in North America, labelled the EPA findings relating to the Pavillion gas field in Wyoming as "not factual" and said that the findings "only serve to trigger undue alarm".
