E.ON's $3.8 billion gas network to attract interest from six consortia

Six consortia are expected to submit general expressions of interest for E.ON's $3.8 billion (€3 billion) gas transmission network on Friday, according to media reports, interesting companies from France, Belgium and Italy. The Nord Stream pipeline delivered its first commercial gas to the European network in November and directly connects Russia to Germany, making E.ON's asset one of strategic importance.
