Cheniere to break ground on Sabine Pass liquefaction in “two to three weeks” – Charif Souki

Cheniere CEO Charif Souki has told GMT that he expects construction crews to break ground on the liquefaction phase of the Sabine Pass LNG project in “two to three weeks”. In an exclusive interview at the World Gas Conference in Kuala Lumpur this week, he said that would put the project on track to deliver first LNG by the end of visual_editor015, with all four trains to be up and running before the end of visual_editor017.
