An Asian gas hub – a long revolution in the making

The establishment of a so-called Asian gas trading hub will take many years. However, while this view is widely held, there is less consensus over what form that hub might take. The market is already witnessing a number of “first steps” towards the development of multiple pricing areas in Asia. Gas Strategies considers to what extent these “first steps” are in fact real, what is meant by a “hub”, and the prospects for a liquid gas trading hub in Asia.
