Chinese gas demand – The next bubble?

As China's economy has ballooned over the past decade, so has its gas demand – more than doubling since 2009. The global gas industry has invested billions of dollars in projects to supply the Chinese market, which is often viewed as a bottomless pit. But China's gas demand growth – not to mention economy – is now showing signs of faltering, and the market looks set to become oversupplied. Gas Strategies asks whether the exponential growth in China's gas consumption has peaked, and what this means for global gas exporters counting on the country's perceived never-ending demand.
