Greece, Israel and Cyprus discuss East Med pipeline viability

Energy ministers from Israel, Greece and Cyprus met in Athens this week to discuss the proposed 16 Bcm/year subsea East Med gas pipeline, which would export gas from Israel to Europe through Greece.

Greek energy minister Panos Skourletis hosted counterparts Yiorgos Lakkotrypīs from Cyprus and Yuaval Steinitz from Israel, with the trio agreeing to present a financial and technical study of the 1,300 km pipeline project by the end of October.
