

29 February 2020

Contents

NextDecade interview: Kathleen Eisbrenner, founder and CEO
Publication date: 07 February 2017

Gas Strategies Group

10 Saint Bride Street
London UK
EC4A 4AD

ISSN: 0964-8496

T: +44(0) 20 7332 9900
W: www.gasstrategies.com
Twitter @GSInfoServices

Editorials

+44(0) 20 7332 9957
editor@gasstrategies.com

Subscriptions

+44(0) 20 7332 9976
subscriptions@gasstrategies.com

NextDecade interview: Kathleen Eisbrenner, founder and CEO

Asked whether we are likely to see a second wave of LNG exports from the Lower 48 United States, Kathleen Eisbrenner, CEO of US LNG project developer NextDecade, is unequivocal. She believes that leading the second wave will be her company's proposed 27 mtpa Rio Grande LNG project, which she claims will be the world's most competitive. What's more, it will become the gateway for new gas resources in the Permian and Eagle Ford basins, large enough to make Texas "a stranded gas play" – larger than Qatar from a hydrocarbon resource standpoint. Eisbrenner is convinced there will be a second wave of multiple US export projects coming on stream in the next decade. If she's right, life is about to get even tougher for other proposed liquefaction projects around the world.

Consulting

+44 (0) 20 7332 9900
consult@gasstrategies.com

Alphatania Training

+44 (0) 20 7332 9910
training@gasstrategies.com

Information Services

+44 (0) 20 7332 9976
subscriptions@gasstrategies.com