FLAME 2017: TAP nearly half built as olive trees cleared

Construction of the Trans-Adriatic Pipeline is nearing the mid-way point and works on the landfall in Puglia have resumed following the lifting of a court order that was protecting olive trees along the route.

Speaking to Gas Matters Today on the side-lines of Flame conference in Amsterdam on Thursday, TAP commercial and external affairs director Ulrike Andres said the pipeline is “currently about 40% built”.
