KEPCO tentatively restarts Takahama nuclear reactor 3

Japanese utility Kansai Electric Power (KEPCO) is tentatively restarting operations at unit 3 of its 3.3 GW Takahama nuclear power plant in Fukui prefecture, amid heightened concerns for atomic safety across the country.

The 870 MW reactor will be the second of four reactor units to return to commercial service at Takahama since the 2011 Fukushima disaster and subsequent across-the-board nuclear shutdowns.

The pressurised water reactor at unit 3 was fired up on Tuesday and is ...
