The EU ETS Interview: Adam Whitmore, Sandbag climate adviser

With the trilogue negotiations between the European Parliament, the Council of the EU and the European Commission still under way, it's not yet too late to fix the European Union's Emissions Trading System. In this interview, Adam Whitmore, independent climate adviser and one of the authors of a recent Sandbag report on the impacts of Brexit on ETS reform, sets out what is needed to make the world's largest carbon market fit-for-purpose. But he is sceptical that all the required reforms will be realised.
