Japan poised to double nuclear output as KEPCO clear to restart Ohi reactors

Japanese utility Kansai Electric Power (KEPCO) is preparing to restart two reactors totalling 2.36 GW at its Ohi nuclear power plant in Fukui prefecture early next year after receiving the go-ahead from the local authority.

The Fukui prefecture government said this week that Ohi units 3 and 4 could fire up after passing a series of post-Fukushima safety inspections ...
