The decommissioning interview: Andrew Livingstone, decommissioning director, Baker Hughes, a GE company

With a declining gas resource and ageing assets, the UK is positioning itself as a global leader in decommissioning. However, with fiscal reform moving at a glacial pace and the government's ambition to prolong the life of the UKCs sometimes at cross-purposes with its decommissioning aims, it is difficult to nail down exactly what UK leadership in this space might look like. Gas Matters speaks to Andrew Livingstone, decommissioning director at Baker Hughes, a GE company (BHGE), to ask how the UK's experience in this area might be leveraged in the wider industry.
