‘Midstream infrastructure is better placed than ever’: Prostar Capital

The three-pronged crisis of the oil price crash, LNG glut and energy demand destruction caused by the Covid-19 pandemic has, without question, created an extremely difficult, if not terrifying, environment for many in the LNG segment – especially those involved in liquefaction. But for midstream investors and operators – not to mention end-users – low gas and LNG prices have created an unmissable opportunity for growth, Steve Bickerton and Dave Noakes, co-founders and senior managing directors of Prostar Capital, an investment firm focused on midstream infrastructure globally, tell LNG Business Review.
