Emboldened activists target Mountain Valley gas pipeline after slaying Atlantic Coast

Dominion Energy and Duke Energy have scrapped their long-delayed USD 8 billion Atlantic Coast pipeline (ACP), citing ongoing “litigation risk” from environmental pressure groups that renders the project “too uncertain to justify investing more shareholder capital” – despite a favourable Supreme Court ruling last month. The cancellation, which prompted jubilant environmental activists to warn that the troubled Mountain Valley pipeline is next in their crosshairs, was made after ...
