European gas benchmarks TTF and NBP continued to climb on Tuesday amid forecasts of colder weather.

The front-month TTF and NBP contracts remained in the green yesterday, with the rally pinned on forecasts of colder weather for much of Europe in the coming days. TTF closed 9.6% higher at the equivalent of USD 37.72/MMBtu, with NBP up 11.1%.

A dip in pipeline flows from Norway, due to unplanned outages, pushed prices higher on Monday, however gas exports are set to increase today, according to data compiled by Norwegian TSO Gassco. The increased flows could weigh on prices today.

US gas benchmark Henry Hub also climbed, closing 1.7% higher at USD 6.03/MMBtu. Colder weather across the north-east and Midwest pushed Henry Hub higher.

Crude prices rebounded, with prices lifted by a reported attack on an oil tanker off the Gulf of Oman. The vessel operated by Eastern Pacific Shipping was struck by an exploding drone, according to the Associated Press.
