Pricewatch | 30 Jan 2023 | Gas Matters Today

European natural gas prices strengthened slightly on Friday on lower supplies from Norway countering milder weather forecasts.

NBP gained 1.3% settling at USD 17.44/MMBtu on Friday, while the TTF marker rose 1% to USD 17.64/MMBtu.

JKM fell 3.3% to USD 19.5/MMBtu, with the TTF-JKM spread at just USD 1.86.

Futures in Europe swung between small gains and losses after an unplanned outage at Norwegian gas processing plant Kollsnes was announced over the weekend, which is expected to last until Thursday.

However, warmer temperatures this week are likely to ease demand and pressure on gas inventories. According to Gas Infrastructure Europe (GIE), storage levels in Europe as of 28 January were almost 74% full.

A similar picture unfolded in the US, where Henry Hub gained 5.6% and settled at USD 3.11/MMBtu.
